"The ty nice place," said Enright.

"The cops are all right up here—no trouble—and lots of real coin."

"Sport" said he thought it looked all right to him, and decided to close the deal for five girls. "Why, that looks so good to me I'd like to go in on it myself," he said.

The five girls were brought up to the flat, Miss Smith, the detective, assisting Enright. It was about 11 o'clock yesterday morning. "Sport" and his two pals, the five girls and Miss Smith sat down to talk.

"Come now, let's get this out of the way," said "Sport," "Give us the coin and we'll get off."

Slowly counting the five $10 bills Enright handed the money to the men, "Sport" directing how the division should be made.

The rewer hundreds of banners and signs, such as "A Lot of You Are Dead to God," "God Bless You, Billy. No More Booze," and "Old Booze Always Did Hooze Always Did Hoze a Yellow Streak," and, of course, "Brighten the Corner" was the prize marching song of this temperance army.

Flanked by Ma and son Paul, Billy marched very near the head of the procession. He was hatless, and waved his handkerchief very cheerfully to the crowds that lined the sidewalks. But he looked a tired and worn out man. Ma was cheerful, too. She encouraged Billy to wave his handkerchief very offer did the vice were:
